Mission Statement:

JGSCV is a non-profit organization run by enthusiastic volunteers dedicated to the sharing of genealogical information, techniques, and research tools with those interested in Jewish genealogy and family history. Members who include beginners and experienced genealogists share with each other.

See the manifest on page two to find how to reach any of the board members as as contact us on the JGSCV website <https://jgscv.org/contact.html> Note: there are

Jewish Farming Collectives and the Soviet-Created Famine of 1932

"The Hope and the Illusion" chronicles the little-known but historically significant story of the attempt to create Jewish autonomous regions in Ukraine, Belorussia, the Crimea, and Birobidzhan during the period 1921-1938. The project recounts this history through texts and remarkable contemporary photographs - many of which have never before been published. Robert Singer, CEO of World ORT writes on the website: "The history of the creation of Jewish autonomies on the territory of the Soviet Union in the 1920s and 1930s was consigned to oblivion for many years. Nevertheless, then this idea was greeted with enthusiasm not only by the Soviet, but also by the world community. ORT also got involved in helping the Jewish migrants at this difficult time." See <http://ozet.ort.spb.ru/eng/> to read more.

The famine created by the Soviet Politburo began in 1932 when the Central government demanded all foods grown by farm cooperatives in Ukraine. Fifty Million soviet citizens died of starvation. Some of the photos in the ORT project (above) already show starving children and adults. It was suggested that the impetus for ORT to get involved in the Jewish farming collectives was to offset this damage before 1932. Read more at <https://tinyurl.com/2p8c278h>

Aristides de Sousa Mendes, Righteous Gentile, WWII

If you know of anyone who escaped the Holocaust via Portugal and/or is a likely Sousa Mendes visa recipient, please contact the Sousa Mendes Foundation. Chanan Tigay writes in the November 2021 issue of Smithsonian Magazine about Portuguese diplomat Aristides de Sousa Mendes, who was serving as a consul general in France when the Nazis invaded the country. Aristides was a twin, a devoted Catholic, sired 15 children and suspected he descended from conversos, Jews who had been forced to convert during the Spanish Inquisition. He fell into disrepute for disregarding a Portugal directive, Circular 14, effectively forbidding diplomats from offering visas to most refugees—especially Jews. He died in abject poverty with no pension. His surviving children and children of those he rescued kept his name alive. In 1966, the state of Israel honored him as a Righteous Among the Nations at Yad V'Shem. After years of silence, there is now a foundation, a museum in progress, and genealogical searches to find the stories of the estimated 30,000 refugees saved by the efforts of de Sousa Mendez. The Rothschilds of Britain

The British Rothschilds built their estate, Waddesdon completing it in 1883. During WWII it was home to 100 refugee children. Now a part of the National Trust, it is still managed and cared for by a Rothschild and is open to the public for garden and estate tours. The archives available here include family papers, great paintings and art, and world-class gardens. There is an excellent booklet that illustrates the story of the Rothschilds in Britain, their role in the Jewish Colonization Association (JCA), the Zionist movement, and Israel's notable government buildings. Find it by following this link: <https://waddesdon.org.uk/your-visit/house/the-rothschilds-at-waddesdon/>

- Nazi Forced Labor not Jewish slave labor, but those brought from Eastern Europe to work in the German Reich. The number of documents exceed 10 million. When the Allies took over the administration of the vanquished German Reich, they decreed that all the communes, cities have to list the names of Germans living in their communities.

- Displaced persons (DPs) documents post World War II index card file of DPs in Germany and occupied territories. The information includes where they were during the war, relatives, preferred destination upon immigration. Unfortunately, some of the rescue organizations destroyed the information when the persons left Germany therefore, the collection is not complete. When information was needed from reclamation the rescue organizations ceased destroying the information.

They also have passenger lists when people left to go to America, Canada and other destinations.

The files were also used by the Allies for processing refugees from Hungary and Yugoslavia.

In the early years, the workers were mainly DPs. The DPs helped develop the way the Archive works up to today, until they went digital.

The International Red Cross (IRC) took over the administration and the DPs moved on. When the IRC took over the staff became almost exclusively German.

The ITS was established in 1948. There are 30 million documents on over 17.5 million people. A card was created alphabetically/phonetically for each name even if it was misspelled. This resulted in the creation of the Central Name Index (CNI). There are 50 million cards each one representing the mentioning of a person in a document and referencing 17.5 million individuals.

The requests were immense, and a large backlog ensued. The then director of the IRC was not receptive to opening the archives. To allow faster work the ITS began digitizing their archives in 1990s.

Since 2019, these digitized records are known as the Arolsen Archives but also remain the ITS. The Arolsen Archives are open and have broken with former ITS ^] u P • being closed.

Digitization permits the Archives to do more with the records. The goal is to have all of the core collection digitized by 2025, in house, by crowdsourcing and with cooperation of partners. For example, access for researchers have been simplified. The ITS used to be known as a closed archive. Today, one can use it online or apply for full access to the databank for limited time periods.

Online Archive

Since 2015 the ITS has strived to place information online. At first, they were cautious and started with concentration camp documents. This was a vision of the executive director Floriane Azoulay. All historical documents are being placed online. Currently, there are 30 million pages on the online archive, with 30 million personal search cards. Due to privacy issues, not placed online are the requests for information, although they hope to do that in the future, as well as medical files on DPs and forced labor individuals. They received no complaints from other archives and the Bundesarchiv (German National Archives) backed up the Arolsen Archives, which made the other German archives agree and allowed the Arolsen Archive to place the documents online.

The Archive gets updated every couple of months with cooperation from Yad Vashem. Not all documents are yet online and not all those online are yet indexed. Therefore, it is recommended to check the database for the names you are looking for every few months.

To fulfill the mandate to obtain information on all persecutees they have copies of some documents, especially from outside western Europe. There are places with no documents, such as from Ukraine as written about the Holocaust by Bullets by Father DesBois where the Soviets did not supply the information.

Now the ITS, as a hub, digitizes the records from Auschwitz, Stuthoff, deportees from the Reich.

Since the expansion of the online archive, they have over one million unique users in the past three years!

Once the IRC gave up its control the Arolsen Archives is monitored by the International Commission of member states: Belgium, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Poland, the United Kingdom, and the United States of America.

Financing for the Archives is totally from the Federal Republic of Germany government.

Each of the 14 member states obtain one full copy of the archives annually. For example, in Israel Yad Vashem holds the copy and in the United Kingdom it is the Wiener Holocaust Library. In the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, etc. It is a hard copy that is sent to the 14 member states and therefore the records at Arolsen Archives may be more current than what other archives have. With a change of system, they hope to change the time delay.

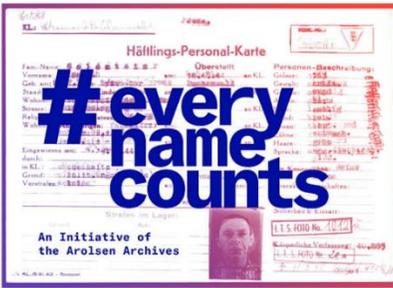

#everynamecounts

This project started two years ago with crowdsourcing starting with students from Germany indexing names from deportation lists. Every document is worked on by three people and the quality is very good. They were using previously unindexed documents and last year uploaded almost one million documents from concentration camps. Given names and surnames, date of birth being the least amount of information one can have to be assured the person you are talking about. In this project they started to index names of relatives, grounds for imprisonment, and more. This will provide better context for researchers.

#everynamecounts

The Arolsen Archives are building a digital monument to the victims of Nazi persecution with the help of thousands of volunteers who are digitizing their names and their life stories.

Now and for future generations.

They have more than 20,000 volunteers for the project, who have done 4.5 million edits of documents.

Data Protection

While the Archives is located in Germany, it is not a German institution. Therefore, they do not adhere to very strict German and European data protection laws. This is fortunate as the German interpretation of the law is strict and getting stricter. Such as the 100-year birth embargo for records, but now if someone died after 100 years they are saying if they could be affected by the publication, 100 years is not enough. The Archives does not have to adhere to the German privacy laws except if they acquire new documents for which they must adhere to the privacy laws. However, Germany says if the Archives do not have a supervisory board above them, then the government will be obliged to do so. Therefore, the Archives is working on having the 11-member IC Board as their data protection authority. They are certain they will not retract what is already published online and intend to place more online as they acquire more documents as they go on. Zwilling said the 100-year embargo is not a law but an interpretation.

The 11-member commission is looking at this. Both Israel and the United States want the information available. For historical documents, they look at 25 years, but this may be something that changes. They are hoping to have a resolution on this by the summer of 2022. The question is what they will add as the requests have much information on those documents.

Deputy Director Zwilling then answered questions from the members.

JGSCV thanked Deputy Director Zwilling for his excellent presentation and for staying up so late to talk with us.

Giora Zwilling is the deputy director of the Archives Department and head of the Archival Description Office since 2017. In 2017 he was the Head of the Archival Description Office. Previously he was a Media consultant for the United Nations Independent Commission of Inquiry on the 2014 Gaza and before then the Head of the Arrangement and Digitization Department of the Yad Vashem Archives, Israel Conflict.

Article #74: A Browser that will not track your every move

By Hal Bookbinder

In response to an email from the X-CHAIR folks about a $500 off special, I clicked on the link to read more. Now, I am receiving regular X-CHAIR pop-ups. No doubt, you have had similar experiences. Google Chrome, Mozilla Firefox and Microsoft Edge track your visits and provide these inestimable ads. As you have undoubtedly heard, “If the product is free, you are the product!”

If you do not want to be tracked and do not want these ads, use the Tor browser and associated DuckDuckGo search engine. They protect your privacy by routing you to a distant location (I often get routed as if I were in Germany). While some ads are displayed (they have to pay the bills), they do not track your searches and do not generate ongoing pop ads. You are also hidden as you surf the net.

There is no cost to the Tor browser or DuckDuckGo search engine. They were developed and maintained by folks who take privacy seriously, almost as a religion. I am not zealous about four browsers on my computer, Microsoft Edge, Mozilla Firefox, Google Chrome and Tor/DuckDuckGo. When I do not want to be tracked, I use the onion router, from The Tor Project, a 501(3)(c) organization.

Download Tor and DuckDuckGo at <https://www.torproject.org/download/>. Versions are available for Windows, MacOS, Linux and Android. In three years, I have encountered no issues with the Windows version. It takes a few extra seconds each time you invoke it as it creates a random hop-to-trace network routing. It then works like any other browser and search engine.

If Tor has routed you through Germany, you may see some results in German. If Holland, you may see some results in Dutch. Don't let it throw you. It is working to anonymize you. As with any browser, once you connect to a site you run the risk of malware being transferred to your computer directly from that site. So, do not look at Tor as a way to safely visit risky sites.

If you think Google's Incognito mode or Firefox's Privacy mode are sufficient, consider this; while they claim not to record the sites you visit on your computer and to delete any cookies created at the end of your session, they do not make any commitments regarding whether your accesses are tracked for sale to advertisers.

If you want to read more about Tor see https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tor_\(network\)) and if you want to dig deeper, see <https://vpnoverview.com/privacy/anonymebrowsing/tor/>. Along with protecting your privacy, Tor can be used to access “onion” addresses on the dark web. For a quick overview of the dark web, see my November 2017 article, “What is the Dark Web?”

JGSCV Updates

Thank you to Allan Linderman for his outstanding service to JGSCV both on the board of directors and as newsletter editor from June 2009 through the middle of 2021. TWELVE FANTASTIC YEARS!

In addition to his excellent newsletter skills, Allan provided input on a myriad of other JGSCV projects and was “always there” to conduct with membership surveys and help out with administrative issues. His guidance through the years has helped make JGSCV the success it is!

Family Histories: Call for Entries

In July 2020, our speaker, Joan Adler, suggested members write down family memories and/or genealogical discoveries. We’ve published fascinating and personal family histories and would love to include more of these stories in this newsletter.

For ideas and assistance, please contact our newsletter editor, Diane Goldin and Jan Meisels Allen at president@jgscv.org.

January Meeting

Michael Tobias presents Ich Bin Ein Berliner: (Re)uniting Five Half-siblings from Four Different Mothers

In July 2020, during the Covid19 pandemic a woman in the UK asked for help in identifying her newly discovered (via DNA) Jewish birthfather. She could not imagine the story about to unfold. In the next three weeks, following the DNA trail and building family trees for each of 8 significant DNA hits on 3 different websites, her ties to four half-siblings were identified, all sharing the same father but with four different mothers. To be certain of the connections between the DNA matches and the siblings, it was necessary to use the Jewish Records Indexing t Poland database to create family trees going back to the late 1700s. In the process the accuracy of the DNA estimated family relationships could be compared with the true family relationships and the impact of any endogamy could be analyzed.

Speaker Michael Tobias, OBE is a co-founder and Board Member of Jewish Records Indexing t Poland (1995); Vice President of the Jewish Genealogical Society of Great Britain (JGSGb 2019); Honorary Research Fellow in Genealogical Studies, University of Strathclyde (2020); Former Vice President, Programming of JewishGen, Inc (1998). He was Database matching consultant to the International Commission on Holocaust Insurance Claims. Michael was awarded the International Association of Jewish Genealogical Societies Lifetime Achievement Award in Washington in 2011. He was on the List 2021.

There is no charge to attend the meeting. Anyone may join JGSCV and dues are $30 for an individual and $35 for a family. Anyone may join JGSCV at <https://www.jgscv.org/pdf/membership%20application.pdf>

+100,000 records added to the Holocaust Database

JewishGen greatly appreciates that the Kamp Westerbork organization has permitted it to add more than 101,500 records to the JewishGen Holocaust Database. The data set consists of Westerbork victims deported from the Netherlands.

JewishGen Holocaust Database includes data from a variety of sources including museums, websites, historical organizations, individual researchers, and archives. Access it here:

<https://www.jewishgen.org/databases/Holocaust/>

The Wiener Holocaust Library

Located in the United Kingdom, The Wiener Holocaust Library is the oldest Holocaust archive in the world.

From its archival collection of Family Papers it has created a map which traces a refugee family or family member's journey with individual records related to a specific location and period within their travels.

Each record includes material such as letters, emigration documents, memoirs, photo albums, newspaper clippings, and interviews.

To search the map go to: <https://www.refugeemap.org/map>

Diarna: The Geo-Museum of North African and Middle Eastern Jewish Life

Diarna (דיארנא דיארנא "Our homes" in Judeo-Arabic): The Geo-Museum of North African and Middle Eastern Jewish Life is working to digitally preserve the physical remnants of Jewish history throughout the region. We are in a race against time to capture site data and record place-based oral histories before even the memories of these communities are lost.

Diarna pioneers the synthesis of digital mapping technology, traditional scholarship, and field research, as well as a trove of multimedia documentation. All of these combine to lend a virtual presence and guarantee untrammelled access to Jewish historical sites lest they be forgotten or erased. Explore by clicking this link:
